FOR DOMESTIC AND INTERNATIONAL USE

Lab 2.8, March 2016

Hello KVRX lovelies! This is our 2022 – 2023 zine. It was produced during the winter and spring by Maddie Jewesson, Maile Carballo, Rylie Jones, Rachel Williams, and Gabi Williams. Special thanks to KVRX Station Manager Cole Hunt and KVRX Advisors Frank Serpas and Nathan Cuttieta. The content in this small magazine is made up of submissions from KVRX members and DJs. There are various fonts used, but the consistent body copy is News Gothic Standard.

KVRX

BINGO

	Wtf is going on in the discord...	her 	Written subliminal messages on the chalkboard
		Took a nap in the station		Had an embarrassing Sunday 3x3
	Prays to Phoebe Bridgers every night		Smudged by clown makeup at a Garden concert	Body Odor
Skipped every general meeting		Cried when Mac DeMarco cancelled his atx show		Scared of hipster baristas OR are one
	Big Thief got you through a breakup		Weak attempt at a mosh pit	Listening to Otto play the most ungodly shit ever

While he sits & ponders,

Ingredients:

Midori
Lime Juice (or a Lime)
Lemon Juice (or a Lemon)
Soda Water
Cherries/Grenadine (if you want)

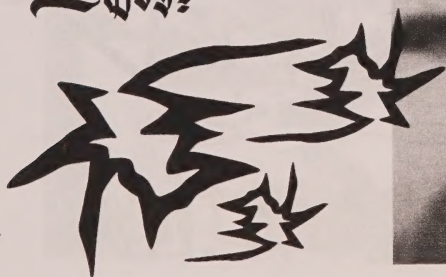

by DJ no sleep

Pour Midori and soda water in a 1:1 ration (2 ounces of each for a standard drink). Add half an ounce of lemon/lime juice each, or juice two quarters each (Sour mix could be used as well). Shake/Mix with ice and garnish with 1-2 cherries and a lime slice.

Very Cherry Variant:

Add an additional half ounce of cherry juice/grenadine after mixing to make a cherry sunrise!

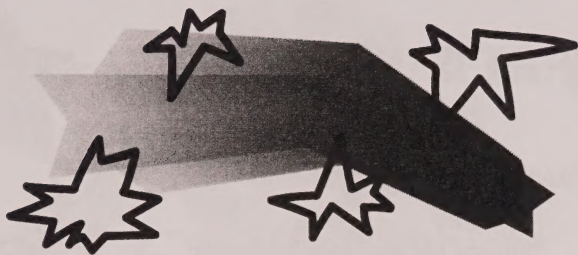

Enjoy!

KVRX IS LAME

HAH i gotcha there, no. It's a home away from home, I spend most of my day in the station, enjoying whatever dj is on and the material they present me with. Creative headspaces are abundant in the booth and all around. It's been the driving force behind anything I've made recently, and I bet hella cool dj-s would agree with this testimony.

"Freak"

In middle school, I used to be called a freak.
I thought it was because I was tall.
But then why wasn't the 6'9 7th grader a freak?
Maybe it's because I was half Hispanic.
No, our school was majority Hispanic.
Was it because I was half white then?
No, plenty of people and teachers were white.
So why was I the freak?
I laid in bed every night for months trying to answer that Reason after reason, cause after cause.
It has to be my posture.
And so I straightened my back.
It must be what I eat.
So I never touched pizza again.
It has to be what I like.
New playlist.
New TV shows.
New friends.
New me.
One day I locked myself in my room.
I found every mole,
Every pimple,
Every blemish,
And I cut them off with a box cutter.
I got to my forehead, my hands covered in blood.
A brown spot on my forehead.
I've had it since I was a baby.
My family always called it an angel's kiss.
It was always a part of me,
A part of my life.
But it was wrong.
A sniper's dot.
It made me a target.
It had to go.
I raised the box cutter up, crying.
I placed it against my forehead.
Gritting my teeth, I pressed it in.
And stopped.
I couldn't do it.
I had lost myself.
I ran out, crying to my parents.
A gorey shadow of the boy I was just a few months ago.
Stitches, glue, and bandages.
I had been covered up in gauze.
I looked like a half-finished mummy.
And I had to go to school like this.
After an hour of begging, I was driven.
If they saw me on the bus, I'd be done.
At least at school, I could run.

The cafeteria doors stood before me.
The gates of hell.
My name was to change.
My birthname didn't matter,
When I walk in, I'll be one thing,
Freak.
I step in, tears already on the rise.
I slowly walk to my usual table, my friends staring at me.
I sit down, waiting.
But nothing.
They continue talking as if I wasn't a medical mess.
Nobody calls out.
Nobody teases me.
And I realize why.
I look to the other end of the cafeteria.
A short boy, surrounded by my former bullies.
A new target.
The same treatment.
"Freak, freak, freak."
The bell rings.
Everyone empties out, I walk toward the boy.
He sits, head in his hands.
I sit in front of him.
"What did I do?" He mutters.
I stay silent.
"Nothing." I finally peep out
"You never do anything wrong."
"It's because I'm-"
"No. It's not you. It's them."
"It's always been them."
"It will always be them."
He looks up at me.
He has to crane his neck because he's much shorter than me.
"Jesus, you're tall."
"Says you. I almost didn't see you there."
We laugh together.
Each of us a freak.
But despite it all,
We could still laugh.
We could still talk.
We could still exist.
Together.
Freaks united.
